3:30 - 4:45 PM
Writing Group
Group location will be offered upon registration and it will take place Thursday, 4/31, 4/7, 14, 21
Writing is a creative tool that can help survivors process their experiences and emotions, often leading to deep understanding and release. We're facilitating a space to help survivors explore expressive writing through journaling, poetry, and narrative writing. Participants have the option to submit their writing to our Survivor Story Project, as well! This support group is for survivors of interpersonal violence, and intakes are required.

5:30 - 8:30 PM
Speaker's Bureau Orientation
On-campus location provided upon RSVP
One important part of healing and activism for many survivors of interpersonal violence is to tell their stories to others. Primary and secondary survivors complete a 3-hour orientation, and then speak for classes, programs, and conferences arranged through VWAC. Dinner is provided. This support group is for survivors of interpersonal violence, and intakes are required.

MON
11
3:30 - 4:45 PM
Self-Care Containers
Group location will be offered upon registration and it will take place Mondays, 4/11, 18, 25, 5/2
One challenge of taking care of ourselves in healing work is finding the balance between focusing on our emotions and putting them away when it is time to focus on other areas of our lives. We're offering a group for folks to come together and create protective containers. Creating art as a place for emotion to live is an amazing way to heal, especially when we create in community with others. These containers will symbolize spaces to put away fears, nightmares, and worries, as well as a container full of positivity for when we need to reestablish hope. This support group is for survivors of interpersonal violence, and intakes are required.

Chanel will be speaking and answering questions about life, art, and literature as a multiracial Asian American woman.

Recently moved to Fort Collins from San Francisco where she received her master’s in Counseling Psychology. With a background in school counseling, she decided to pursue a clinical counseling path when she realized students, particularly students of color, were not receiving the social-emotional support they needed. Some of Zoë’s counseling areas of expertise include: boundaries, anger, intergenerational trauma, and racial trauma. She enjoys incorporating mindful movement and art into her work. When she’s not working, you can find her training for marathons out on the trails or playing with her dog, Blue!
