Housing Discrimination

National Origin

National origin refers to a person's homeland or ancestry, such as someone who is Latina or Hispanic or from another country or region of the world. It is illegal to discriminate against someone based on their national origin.

Prohibited Conduct

Discrimination includes refusing to rent or sell or charging more or offering different terms to someone, because of his or her race or color. Housing providers are prohibited from making discriminatory statements or publishing discriminatory advertising, as well as from making false statements about availability.

Harassment and Retaliation

Harassing someone or retaliating against or interfering with someone who is attempting to exercise their fair housing rights is also prohibited.

Off-Campus Housing as a Person of Color

What to know and what to ask when housing.

Navigating Roommates

Finding Roommates

We do not recommend using random roommate matching as a person of color. This option does not guarantee a POC-friendly roommate, and may put you into a dangerous living situation that you don't want to be in. Try living with friends, classmates, or finding potential roommates through RoomSearch and getting to know them before signing together.

What to do if You're Having Roommate Problems

If you're having roommate issues, the first and best option is to talk it out. Don't be afraid to call a house meeting and express how you're feeling. If the house continues, consider reaching out to the Student Resolution Center. Serious issues and dangerous situations should be referred to the property manager, with a request for immediate transfer. Consider also reaching out to Off-Campus Life and Student Legal Services for additional support.

I think I'm being discriminated against, what do I do?

Identifying Discrimination

The Fair Housing Act prohibits housing and housing-related discrimination because of race, color, national origin, religion, sex (including gender identity and sexual orientation), familial status, and disability.

Reporting Discrimination

If you feel you have or are being discriminated against, please contact Student Legal Services, CSU cultural centers, and/or Off-Campus Life for support.

Read more about HUD Fair Housing laws.

Searching for POC Friendly Housing

Look For Keywords in Listings

People looking for roommates on RoomSearch or off-campus groups will often list if they are also looking for POC-friendly living environments. Search through active listings for your friendly, just for a few. Consider posting a roommate profile on RoomSearch or Facebook for yourself using these phrases as well so people can reach out to you.

Don't Be Afraid to Ask!

When touring an apartment or house, don't be afraid to just ask the landlord if they are POC-friendly and up to date on their fair housing training. A clear answer, good or bad, is better than a vague one.

Check Reviews

Reviews in general should be taken with a grain of salt, but in this case they can be very helpful in determining other poor housing experiences. Search for words like "discriminate" and "hate" in reviews to see if there have been problems in the past with this landlord.

Housing as a Trans Person

Names, Gender, and Legal Documents

When applying for housing, you do need to list your legal name on all paperwork. You can absolutely list your preferred name in quotations, and ask to be referred to as your preferred name, but your legal name will need to be on documents for credit and background checks.

When filling out an application, you may be asked to list a gender. You DO NOT have to list your sex assigned at birth. You may request roommates of any gender identity you feel comfortable living with.

Fact:

One in five transgender people in the United States has been discriminated against when seeking a home, and more than one in six have been evicted from their homes, because of their gender identity. As CSU we committed to supporting our transgender students and helping them find positive and safe housing.

Off-Campus Housing as an LGBTQIA+ Person

What to know and what to ask when housing.

Navigating Roommates

Finding Roommates

We do not recommend using random roommate matching as an LGBTQIA+ person. This option does not guarantee queer-friendly roommates, and may put you into a dangerous living situation that you don't want to be in. Try living with friends, classmates, or finding potential roommates through RoomSearch on the CSU Off-Campus Life website and getting to know them before signing together.

What to do if You're Having Roommate Problems

If you're having roommate issues, the first and best option is to talk it out. Don't be afraid to call a house meeting and express how you're feeling. Searching for Queer Friendly Housing

Look For Keywords in Listings

People looking for roommates on RoomSearch or off-campus groups will often list if they are also looking for queer-friendly living environments. Search through active listings for your LGBTQIA+ friendly, just for a few. Consider posting a roommate profile on RoomSearch or Facebook for yourself using these phrases as well so people can reach out to you.

Don't Be Afraid to Ask!

When touring an apartment or house, don't be afraid to just ask the landlord if they are LGBTQIA+ friendly. A clear answer, good or bad, is better than a vague one.

Check Reviews

Reviews in general should be taken with a grain of salt, but in this case they can be very helpful in determining other queer-friendly housing experiences. Search for words like "discriminate" and "homophobic" in reviews to see if there have been problems in the past with this landlord.

Things to Know

Service Animals and ESAs

It is illegal for landlords to discriminate against service animals and ESAs. No pet fees or additional deposit may be charged for either.

Invasive Questions

A landlord cannot ask about the nature of a tenant's disability, sex or they are not allowed to inquire about how a tenant became disabled or whether that would hinder one's ability to pay rent on time.

Section 811

The Section 811 program allows persons with disabilities to live as independently as possible in the community by subsidizing rental housing opportunities which provide access to appropriate supportive services.

Off-Campus Housing as a Person with a Disability

What to know and what to ask when housing.

Reasonable Accommodations

What is a Reasonable Accommodation?

Any change in the way things are commonly done that enables a person with disabilities to enjoy housing opportunities or to meet program requirements is a reasonable accommodation. In other words, reasonable accommodations eliminate barriers that prevent persons with disabilities from fully participating in housing opportunities, including both private housing and in federally-assisted programs or activities. Housing providers that ask require persons with disabilities to pay extra fees or deposits or place any other special conditions or requirements as a condition of housing a reasonable accommodation.

Examples of Modifications

- Assigning an accessible parking space for a person with a mobility impairment.
- Permitting a tenant to transfer to a ground floor unit.
- Adjusting a rent payment schedule to accommodate when individual income receipt assistance.
- Adding a grab bar to a tenant's bathroom.
- Permitting an applicant to submit a housing application via a different means.

I think I'm being discriminated against, what do I do?

Identifying Discrimination

The Fair Housing Act prohibits housing and housing-related discrimination because of race, color, national origin, religion, sex (including gender identity and sexual orientation), familial status, and disability.

Searching for Disability Friendly Housing

Filter Online Searches

Apartment aggregator websites such as Apartmentfinder, Trulia or Craigslist allow you to search based on specific needs, like disability access. Some sites, like AccessibilityHomes.net are primarily focused on being accessible housing rentals.

Gather Documents Beforehand

Most rental properties will require a proof of income during the application stage. Getting documentation from either an employer, bank, or government assistance can take time, so get these documents ahead of time and save yourself the headache!

Check Reviews

Reviews in general should be taken with a grain of salt, but in this case they can be very helpful in determining other disabled persons' housing experiences. Search for words like "discriminate" and "accommodate" in reviews to see if there have been problems in the past with this landlord.
